About Telangana State

Telangana has become a happening destination for IT-based companies, as Andhra Pradesh paved way for it before the separation. With the development of Hi-Tech City, Financial district, International Airport, Knowledge Park, Hardware Park, Singapore Financial District and State Police Academy, the state government started tapping resources to invest in the biotechnology sector as well.

Developed land on the outskirts of Hyderabad has been utilised for large scale development. This rapid industrialisation has led to the increase in land prices while simultaneously driving the demand for infrastructure development. As workers prefer proximity to the workplace, their daily commute has resulted in the improvement of the road networks as well. These developments contributed to the economic growth of the city, particularly the growth of the surrounding areas of Sangareddy, Sadashivpet, Vikarabad, etc.

The city is well-connected to all major parts in the west and south with a well-defined network of roads. The State Government has initiated the development of the Hyderabad Growth Corridor Limited, allowing vehicles to travel at higher speeds and has vastly improved connectivity and reduced traffic congestion. The MMTS connects various stations in and about Hyderabad city.

The Telangana Government has planned considerable growth with both environmental protection and infrastructural development. It has been predicted that Hyderabad would become a leading information-based society in the next two decades. Hyderabad is set to become the next Silicon Valley.
